So here we are in America, the most technologically advanced nation in the world, and we can't make car commercials where the wheels look like they're going forwards. I'm positive there are Japanese and Germans and even some enlightened Albanians who just snigger every time they see one of those ads. Snigger! They know car wheels are supposed to run forwards, even if the chowderheads who make car commercials don't. And I really have to wonder — why don't the chowderheads know? Could it be that nobody's ever told them? It seems farfetched, but I suppose it's remotely possible for a chowderhead who's lived all his/her life in a TV studio not to know that if car wheels really did what it looks like they do in the car ads (spin slowly backwards while the car is rocketing toward the horizon), then that incredibly hot Spitfire Marauder ZX300 would simply explode axle parts, grease, and scalding transmission fluid all over the camera crew, while the anguished drivers (that sultry babe and gorgeous hunk) watch their car-commercial modelling careers head right down the toilet.

But maybe I'm being naive. That would be a switch. Usually I'm known as "The Cynic's Cynic," or "Mr. Spoil-Everything-That's-Wholesome," which is what's printed on my business cards. Mr. Spoil-Everything would tell you that the people making those car commercials, along with the car company executives who authorize their incredibly bloated salaries...all those extremely rich people do know that car wheels are supposed to run forwards. Furthermore, they know that with just a teensy bit more care paid to the technical details of car commercial-making, the wheels could look like they're running forwards. They know all this. But they don't care! They don't care for a simple reason: they don't have to. Because they also know that with all those shiny cars flashing in a blur along that lonesome California road; with all those dollar signs filling up the screen (high, high rebates; low, low APR); with those beautiful drivers (they're actors) beckoning you to share their bucket seat...they've already thrown so many bogus images at the poor idiot couch potato that it doesn't matter if the wheels run backwards! They believe that if customers buy a car based on car commercials, they deserve what they get.

Unfortunately for the future of the human race, the car-commercial people are probably right. Because Americans believe what they see on TV. You've all read those ads in the supermarket tabloids: Amazing New Cuticle Clipper That Doubles As Workout Machine — As Seen On TV!!! To Americans this means, "As Actually Spoken By God!!!" So it doesn't take a genius to figure out that all over the country, every day of the year, there are TV-watchers shuffling into automobile showrooms and going, "I want that there JL28 that goes zero to sixty in 3 seconds...and then backs up." And the salesperson answers, "Sure -- that model comes factory-equipped with matching actors and 50,000 miles of guaranteed driving as fast as you can on winding roads by the ocean, and you'll never meet another car. Sign here. Snigger."

JOE BOB BRIGGS

I get these letters from people who wanna write "short stories." I never get letters from people who wanna write "long stories."

It's like they're renting their type-writer by the hour or something. The letters always start out, "I love short stories. Have you ever read Saki?"

Listen to me. Get this through your head. Nobody loves short stories. The only thing Saki is good for is washing down chop suey. The only people who say they love short stories are the people who also say they wanna write short stories.

I don't know when this comes over people. It's like malaria. One day they're perfectly normal. The next day they wake up in hysterics, shivering all over, convinced they have to go out and write short stories. Because there's no other rational explanation.

It's like the guys in film school who make short films. I don't mean music videos. There's a reason to make music videos. Dinero. I mean little three-minute and six-minute and eight-minute films where they're trying to tell a story.

Listen up again: The whole world hates these things. Stop making these! Do you hear me? I've been a judge of short-film competitions all over the country. They're like a form of mental torture. Introduce a character, have the character go to the grocery store, have the character talk about his life, say goodbye to the character — that's what you do in a short film. It's like watching somebody digest a goat-cheese salad.

I can only think of one possible reason to make short films — to get a job writing for "Saturday Night Live." They haven't had a sketch in ten years that has an ending. They just introduce a joke, tell the same joke in ten different ways, and then go to a commercial with the actors standing around looking vaguely uncomfortable. These people are the only people in the world who actually like stories that have a beginning, but no middle and no end.

Or how about "one-act plays?" Got any actor friends? Ever hear this? "We're doing an evening of one-acts."

Could I please have my fingernails ripped out, one by one, instead?

There are thousands of these one-act plays. The only reason I can figure out for these things to exist is that people were too lazy to write, rehearse, and perform a real play.

"Well, really, Joe Bob, it's just a character study. Slice of life."

Slice up somebody else's life!

When did we get this passion for unfinished plays? Because that's all they are. When we read a book, watch a movie, go to the theater, we wanna feel like we finished something. Is this so hard to understand?

Do you know how annoying this is? I'm gonna tell you the name of the most annoying writer, filmmaker and playwright in America. The one who's the biggest loser and faker on the face of the earth. The guy who couldn't tell a complete story if his life depended on it.

But I can't, because this is a short one-act column. It's over.

EARTHWEEK: A DIARY OF THE PLANET

By Steve Newman

Mideast Storm

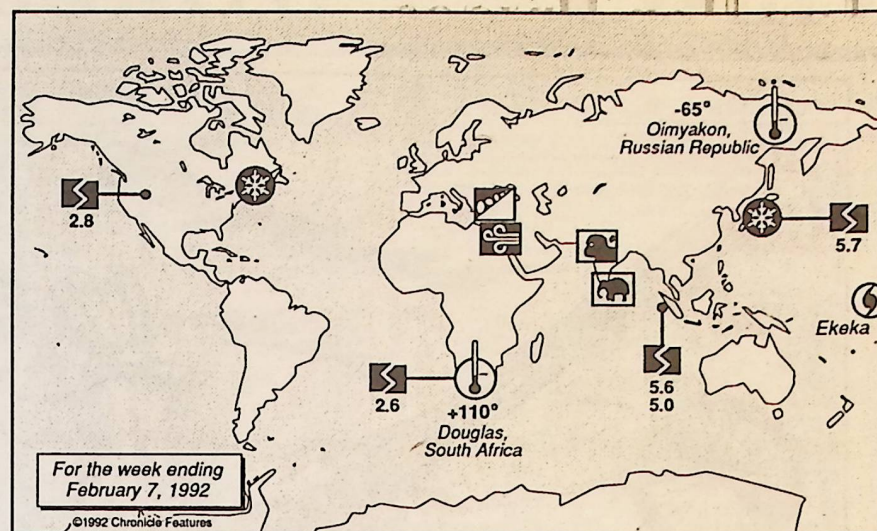

Unusually severe weather struck many parts of the eastern Mediterranean. Cyprus received its first snowfall in 40 years, while extremely rare blizzards swept across Jordan. Villages and towns were cut off in both countries. Heavy rains in Lebanon and Israel caused flooding that swamped roads and knocked out telephone circuits. Three soldiers belonging to the United Nations peacekeeping force in the Golan Heights were swept away by flood waters which poured into Syria when an Israeli-built reservoir burst its banks. In Egypt, 14 people were killed as a result of a sandstorm that whipped across the country. Most were killed by uprooted trees or collapsed structures.

Avalanche

The Turkish government declared the mountainous region of southeast Anatolia a catastrophe zone after avalanches killed nearly 200 people in six separate villages. Most of the dead were in Gormec, in the province of Sirnak, bordering Iraq, where the bodies of 71 soldiers and 49 Kurdish civilians were recovered. The government asked the survivors to move to safer locations because of continuing heavy snowfall in the region.

War Victims

Land mines planted by Tamil separatists in Sri Lanka have killed or dismembered a large number of elephants, according to one of the country's leading wildlife conservationists. Mazer Hamdoun, director of the Save the Elephant Trust Foundation, said that many top army personnel had informed him of "this grave destruction" in eastern Amparai, Trincomalee, and Batticaloa areas. It is estimated that there are only 3,200 surviving elephants in the island nation, compared to more than 10,000 at the turn of the century.

Winter's Worst

A blustery winter storm brought Moncton, New Brunswick, its heaviest snowfall from a single storm in the town's history. By the time the 110-hour-long storm abated, more than 63 inches of snow had fallen, and winds of up to 70 miles per hour had created 20-foot-high drifts. Schools and businesses throughout the Canadian Maritime Provinces were closed, and traffic was at a standstill from the second blizzard to strike within a week.

Tokyo's heaviest snowfall in six years knocked out power lines, blocked roads and airport runways, and left scores of fallen pedestrians hospitalized with broken bones.

Tropical Storm

Ekeka, the first North Pacific hurricane to form during January in 25 years, dissipated as it passed over the Marshall Islands archipelago.

Earthquakes

A sharp pre-dawn tremor, and several aftershocks, rocked the Tokyo area, injuring at least 30 people and causing several small blazes. Ten South African miners died when a weak tremor unleashed a rock fall in one of the world's deepest gold mines, near Carletonville, 60 miles southwest of Johannesburg. Hundreds of homes were destroyed by two quakes in southern and western Sumatra. A weak quake was felt in Wyoming.

Correction

Last week's column incorrectly reported that the lowest temperature measured by the more than 6,500 official worldwide synoptic weather stations was minus 134 degrees in Chelyuskin, Siberia. The coldest was actually minus 67 degrees at Renland, Greenland. The error was due to improper coding of the weather data at the Russian weather station. The coldest temperature ever recorded in the northern hemisphere was minus 81 degrees at the town of Snag in the Yukon Territory on February 3, 1947.

Monkey Business

Indian officials released a monkey into the wild after it had been arrested and caged for 66 days because of the animal's amorous exploits. The monkey was captured two months ago after it had "molested" some 30 young women patients and nurses in a hospital near the Kashmir winter capital of Jammu by hugging and kissing them. The government ordered the monkey to be shot after nurses threatened to go on strike, but it was trapped alive when devout Hindus demanded that its life be spared. The adventurous animal was last seen fleeing into the forest, swinging from tree to tree.

Dorothea Viehmann grew up in an inn kept by her mother and father near Kassel, Germany. She listened to talk of travelers. And eventually told what she'd heard to two men named Grimm. According to the literary footnotes, it was from her narrations that those brothers got many if not most of their renowned fairy tales.

To the early French, the four suits in playing cards symbolized the four classes of society: Hearts for the church, spearpoints (spades) for the military, diamond-shaped tiles for the merchants, and cloverleaves (clubs) for the peasants. Order of importance suggested the military overpowered the church, the church subdued the merchants, and the merchants dominated the peasants.

After dinner last night my mother was yelling at me, crying and laughing all at once. She said it's my fault she lost her mind.

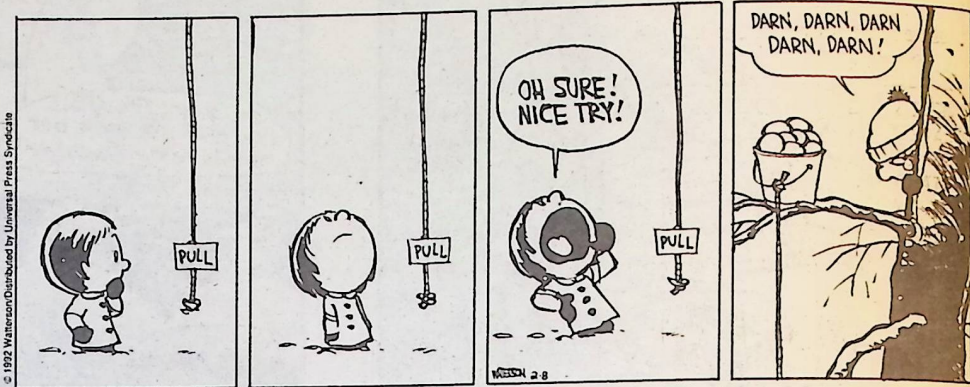

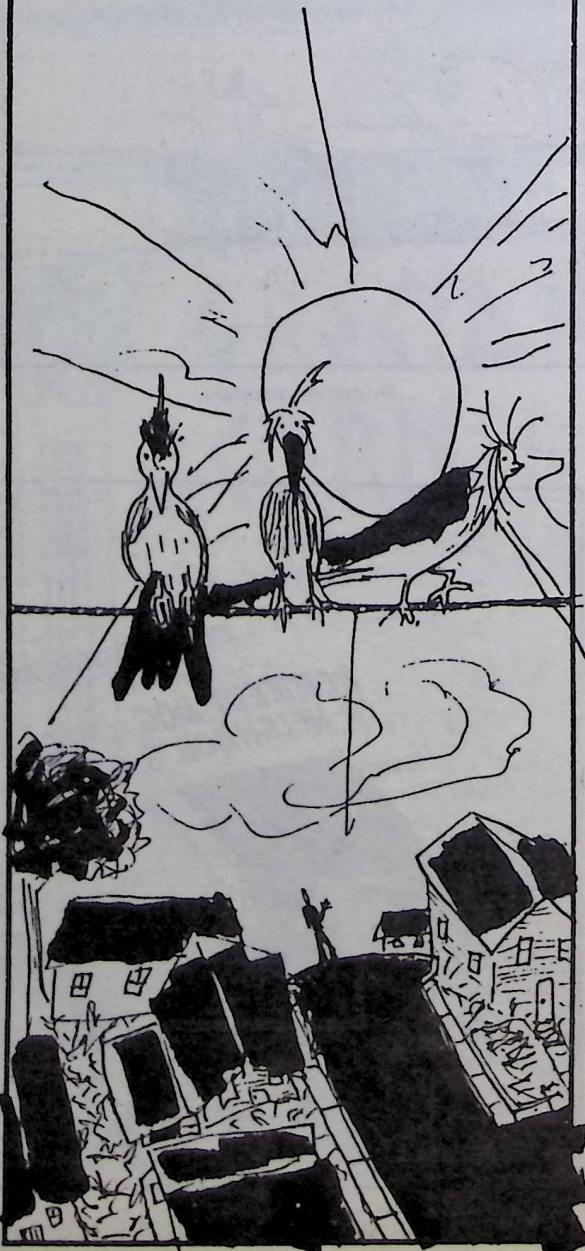

I told her I lost part of my mind when she got a divorce.

She screamed she didn't care.

I left the front door open so her parrot would fly away.

I love our little talks after dinner.

humor me

by Izzy Gesell

Walking into the local supermarket the other day, I immediately sensed something was different. I do all the shopping for my family so I know my emporium and the kinds of people who patronize it pretty well. Experienced shoppers have a placid aura about them. Having decided to spend an hour and a half navigating the aisles, they are calm. The people in the store were anything but.

It took me only a second to figure out why that was - the place was crawling with males who obviously never spent much time grocery shopping.

These folks usually got their food at Cumberland Farms, one meal at a time. They never bought more than they could bring to the cash register in their two hands. So what were they doing in the Super Buy and Fly at 5 PM on a Friday? Closer scrutiny revealed that they were all in the corner of the store where the flower shop was. Egad! It was Valentine's Day and these were the unfortunates who hadn't yet purchased a gift for their sweethearts. With an instinct for survival rivaling anything ever seen on a PBS nature show they had lemminged to the one place where they could be sure of not screwing up.

Surrounding the offerings, the men checked both price and what the other desperate fellows were choosing. Generally, the suits were buying roses and the casual clothes were clutching bouquets of various sorts. I hadn't seen roses move this fast since I covered a Moonie convention in Pamplona. For some reason, the non-rose bouquets were various combinations of purple flowers. "These all look the same," I overheard one guy mutter. "It doesn't matter what you get," another answered mechanically, "just as long as you bring something." Ain't that the truth.

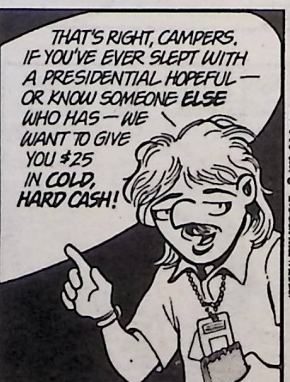

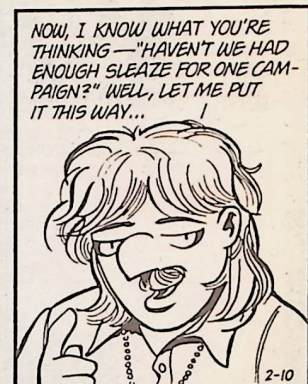

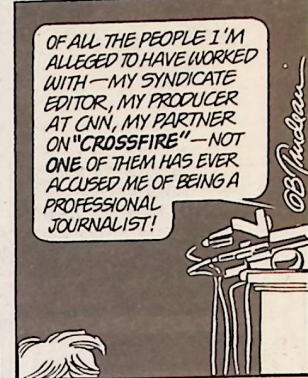

I took my choice to the checkout line that had been set up just for flower purchases. Here the atmosphere was calmer. Everyone was relaxed because the hard part was over and no one was going home empty-handed. There was a feeling of smug satisfaction on the faces in line. The camaraderie among this group of procrastinating strangers was similar to that of a hometown crowd leaving a sports stadium after a great, upset victory. I wanted to turn to the man behind me and give him a high five. "Yeah. Good work. You picked a nice one. Have a good night." (wink, wink) If beer companies targeted "sensitive guys," this would be Miller Time.

Out on the street, I was struck by how widespread this floral instinct was. Males of all ages, sizes and socioeconomic levels were carrying flowers. Metalheads, stockbrokers, hippies, construction workers, third graders and college students all had some kind of blossom in their hands and a look on their faces that said, "See, I've done something right. I did it and I'm even showing off in public. Aren't I a good boy? Can I have my treat now?"

I hear that next year Robert Bly and Merlin Olsen will jointly sponsor an FTD bouquet. The flowers will come in a reusable, ceramic belly of a beast. Grrrrr.....

CAMPAIGN '92 — TRASH FOR CASH

9. You're dating a married father of three with presidential ambitions. You believe that you and he have a future together. Explain.

10. Name three movies besides "Pretty Woman" that have helped shape your personal philosophy.

YOU MAY NOW BEGIN! REMINDER TO ALL YOU GENNIFERS: SPELLING COUNTS!

GB Puchner

SOME OF YOU MAY BE WONDERING WHY WE'VE INCLUDED THE BUSH-MEISTER IN OUR "TRASH-FOR-CASH" OFFER...

WHY? SIMPLE FAIRNESS! WHY SHOULD THE PUTATIVE G.O.P. NOMINEE NOT BE HELD TO THE SAME STANDARDS OF PERSONAL CONDUCT THAT HIS COMPETITION IS?

2-15

TRUE, TRASHING THE REPUTATION OF A SITTING PRESIDENT FOR $25 DOES SEEM A BIT BEYOND THE PALE. BUT TO THOSE WHO WOULD DEMUR, LET ME ASK THIS...

GB Puchner

HOW'S ANOTHER 25 SMACKS SOUND? HUH? HUH?

HELLO? I'M SICK OF THE LIES...

SENATOR, AS WE HEAD INTO THIS FIRST PRIMARY, WHAT ARE YOUR EXPECTATIONS? WHAT DO YOU HAVE TO GET TO REMAIN VIABLE?

WELL, TED, GIVEN MY LACK OF EXPOSURE, 8% WOULD BE A TREMENDOUS SHOWING FOR ME.

YES, BUT DON'T YOU REALLY HAVE TO GET TWICE THAT TO STAY IN THE RACE?

2-17

UM... I THINK YOU'RE SETTING THE BAR A LITTLE HIGH, TED...

PERHAPS, BUT THERE DOES SEEM TO BE A CONSENSUS THAT ANYTHING LESS THAN 15% WOULD BE A DISASTER.

GB Puchner

NO... STOP IT! YOU'RE QUEERING MY SPIN!

HOW ABOUT YOU, GOVERNOR?

1% WOULD BE A HUGE VICTORY! HUGE!

GB Puchner

PETER, AS VOTERS TRUDGE TO THE POLLS TODAY, THE LIKELY OUTCOME IS SHROUDED IN MYSTERY. MANY, HOWEVER, HAVE COME TO SEND A MESSAGE. LISTEN TO THESE NEW ENGLAND VOICES...

2-18

I'M VOTING FOR BUCHANAN. I WANT TO SEND BUSH A MESSAGE!

I'M VOTING FOR BUSH. I WANT TO SEND CONGRESS A MESSAGE.

TSONGAS! I'M SENDING A MESSAGE TO BILL CLINTON!

I'M SENDING A MESSAGE TO TOM HARKIN.

BROWN. MY MESSAGE IS FOR JERRY BROWN.

GB Puchner

I WANT TO SEND A MESSAGE TO KERREY, BUT I'D LIKE TO DEDICATE IT TO TSONGAS.

MESSAGE TO GEORGE WITH A "G": WE CARE!

ROLAND, AS YOU LOOK AT YESTERDAY'S RESULTS, WHAT CAN YOU SAY ABOUT THE FIELD NOW? WILL IT BE CHANGING?

WELL, TED, THE CONVENTIONAL WISDOM HASN'T COME DOWN TO BREAKFAST YET, BUT CERTAINLY SOME OF THE CAMPAIGNS HAVE SOMETHING TO CELEBRATE THIS MORNING, WHEREAS OTHERS DO NOT.

THERE'S A STRONG SENSE HERE THAT THREE OF THE CANDIDATES DID BETTER THAN EXPECTED, ONE MET EXPECTATIONS, AND THREE DID WORSE THAN THEY EXPECTED, BUT BETTER THAN WAS EXPECTED OF THEM!

SO ALL OF THIS WAS EXPECTED?

NO, ACTUALLY, TED, IT TOOK US COMPLETELY BY SURPRISE.

2-19

MR. PRESIDENT, HOW DO YOU PERSONALLY INTERPRET THE NEW HAMPSHIRE RESULTS? WERE VOTERS TRYING TO SEND YOU A MESSAGE?

2-20

YES, THEY WERE. AND THE MESSAGE WAS, 'HEY, WE CARE ABOUT THE NEW WORLD ORDER THAT'S GOING ON. WE DON'T LIKE THIS 'AMERICA FIRST' THING THAT'S BEING PUT OUT THERE BY THAT NEGATIVE CROWD THAT WE'RE SEEING.'

THE FACT IS, WHEN AMERICANS OPEN UP THEIR NEWSPAPERS EVERY MORNING, MOST OF 'EM GO RIGHT TO THE SAME SECTION I DO...
